Gas Field Discoverv Big Event Of 1937 in Our Vicinity

Resume of principal events of the past year in territory served by Southern Tier Newspapers given for our readers — Woodhull rates first position in importance — Many deaths from auto accidents — Removal of CCC camp and abandonment of flood control projects also high lights of year.

Addison and vicinity was fortunate during the past year that there were no major mishaps to mar the serenity of the people of this vicinity. Death visited some homes while births and marriages were taking place in others to bring joy and happiness. Business was not equal to the year 1936 owing to national conditions beyond the control of the people here. Farmers during the year benefited from increased milk checks to help stave off the outside depression influence.

The biggest event of the year in this vicinity was the discovery of gas in Woodhull and the subsequent erection of nearly a score of gas rigs there for penetrating the earth to bring to the surface this rich store of nature's fuel.

As the second most important news story of the year in this vicinity we would rate the increased pay for milk producers brought about by cooperative bargaining agencies among the milk producers.

During the year Addison lost three of her clergymen, these being; the Rev. Thomas A. Withey from the Episcopal Chapel of the Redeemer; the Rev. Kenneth Arnold from the Baptist Church and both the Rev. Francis Moffett and the Rev. J. Edward McKay from St. Catherine's Catholic church.

The abandonment of the CCC camp here and the abolition of the flood control dam on Tuscarora Creek is probably the third most important story, owing to the plans made for that project and the potential wealth and safety that would accrue to Addison and other communities along the creek.

Angelo Sisto was re-elected Republican mayor without a Democratic opponent. And in the fall primaries the village and vicinity, with the exception of Tuscarora, went predominantly Republican. An upset in Tuscarora came when Michael Brennan, Democrat, was elected snupervisor.

Addison leaped into national prominence in the National Radio field when the Baptist Church brake drum chimes were taken from here to New York to be played on a Sunday night program.

Women of the community founded a Civic Society which promoted a community Christmas tree and also worked to secure an inhalator for first aid work for the village and vicinity. This machine is now available in the telephone office for all emergencies caused by shock, fire, drowning and other sickness.

A series of mysterious fires which were set in a Woodhull school caused police action to bring the young lads to task for their misdeeds. They wanted to go to a new school and burned the old one.

Addison sent a carload of food and cash to the Mississippi flood sufferers in the first of the year. This was one of the great major catastrophes of national prominence during the year just past.

A chronological tabulation of events of the year as recorded in the columns of this paper is printed with this resume.

Musical Story Tells Christmas Tale Sunday

The Christmas story in music was presented Sunday evening in the Baptist Church by the pastor and family.

Only a manger cold and bare,
Only a maiden mild,
Only some shepherds kneeling there,
Watching a little child;
And yet that maiden's arms enfold
The King of Heaven above,
And in the Christ-Child we behold
The Lord of Life and Love.

Drillers Are Watching Finch Well's Progress

Gas operators in the Woodhull field are anxiously watching the Charles Finch well. Yesterday the drill was pounding away a few inches in the top of the sand and only a slight amount of gas has come from the hole. The Finch is located on the southwest side of the field and some fear is felt that the sand is hardening down in that direction to limit the area The Finch is being drilled by Acme Drilling Company for New York Natural Gas Crp.

Other wells cased ready for drilling in are the E. G. Husted and the Earle Brown. The Brown well was cemented this week casing having been set at a depth of 3,887 feet. It will be drilled in the last of this week or the first of next.

Hi-Lights and Shadows of the Week's News

Vassar College girls have adopted a new slogan--"beguile (the boys) with lisle". It sounds like an innocuous way to help the Chinese but just such a catchy phrase may be the straw which breaks the back of the camel-An industrial boycott of Japanese goods would end China's invasion quicker than pockets full of notes from Secretary Hull.

Orin G. Marlatt Dies Tuesday

The death of Orin G. Marlatt occurred early Tuesday morning at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Rensyler Calkins where he had made his home since the death of Mrs. Marlatt in September.

He had been in ill health for some time but continued his work as a painter and decorator until November of this year which trade he had followed for the past thirty years. Death was due to complications.

Mr. Marlatt was born in Troupsburg, October 15, 1872, the son of John Gideon and Sally Anna Kieth. He married Miss Ella Minard.

Deceased is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Rensyler Calkins of Woodhull, Mrs. Aletha Brush of Bath and five sons, George and Minor of Buffalo, Sheldon of Osceola, Howard of Addison and Clayton Marlatt of Jasper, also several grandchildren.

The funeral will be held Friday at the Smith Funeral Home at two o'clock. The Rev. David H. Davis, pastor of the Woodhull Baptist Church will officiate. Burial will be made in the Troupsburg Cemetery.

The bearers will be the same as those who served for Mrs. Marlatt. They are John Miller, John Whittenhall, Earle Miller, George Andrus, Lee Miller and Howard Symonds.

Mrs. Park Boyd called on relatives in Whitesville, Thursday.

Lucile Chart Is Bride of Arnold Gabel

Christmas brought more than presents to Miss Lucile Chart and Arnold Gabel this year, for they were married Christmas Day at 3:30 o'clock in the afternoon.

The ceremony was performed in the Presbyterian manse by the Rev. John V. Axtell, pastor of the church here. Miss Isabelle Chart and Edwin Chart, sister and brother of the bride, were the attendants.

The bride was attractively gowned in brown biege silk jersey with matching accessories of brown. She wore a corsage of gardenias. Her maid of honor was attired in green velvet with black accessories.

Mr. and Mrs. Gabel then left for a honeymoon trip to Washington and vicinity. After January 15 they will make their home in the Kittle house on South street.

The bride is a graduate of Addison High School, class of 1936 and was salutatorian of her class. After attending Rochester Business Institute she accepted a position in the Ryan Loan Agency in Corning where she is now employed.

The groom is a graduate of Addison High School and is assistant manager of the Atlantic and Pacific Tea Co. store in Addison. He has been employed there for the past three years.

Mr. and Mrs. Gabel have the best wishes of a large circle of friends in Addison and vicinity who wish them well in their marriage.

Mrs. Jennie Howard

Mrs. Jennie Howard, widow of George Howard was buried in Addison yesterday. Mrs. Howard died Sunday afternoon, Dec. 26, 1937, in Corning Hospital after an illness of two weeks.

Mrs. Howard was born near New York January 28, 1853. She married George Howard of New York and the couple moved to Addison more than 50 years ago where he established a grocery and crockery business. For a time his store was located in one half of the S. M. LaGrange block, later being moved to the present site of the Avon Theatre. Some years after her husband's death Mrs. Howard moved to Corning where she has since made her home.

Mrs. Howard was a devout Christian woman, long having been a member of the Addison Presbyterian Church. At her death she was a member of the Corning Presbyterian Church. She was one of the organizers of the Young Ladies Missionary Society of the Presbyterian Church. Alway interested in church affairs she was a constant attendant at services up to the time of her fatal illness.

Mrs. Howard is survived only by one son, William Howard.

"FAIREST AND FOULEST"

This ebbing year of 1937 will go down as one of the "fairest and foulest" in the history of the Republic. Starting most auspiciously it has ended on a wave of disappointment.

As the year was ushered in the country seemed generally ready to accept the fact that a large majority desired no change in administration. The President had denied any aim to transform our fundamental government system, and hope ran high that the following four years would see a halt in the radical moves which had been building up a Washington bureaucracy. It was predicted that an era of good feeling was being ushered in which would bring great prosperity throughout the land, a hope which was fervently shared by every true American.

This idealistic state of mind was shattered early in the year when the President startled his majority membership in Congress, along with the entire nation, with his court-packing plan. Both friends and foes of the administration were astonished to learn Mr. Roosevelt wanted to completely overthrow the very principles of democratic government, by putting upon the Supreme Court six self-appointed justices who would carry out his ideas of remaking American institutions. Members of his own party, outside of a few intimates who helped hatch the plan, were as dumbfounded as Republicans at this rash announcement. And the era of good feeling which had barely started to hatch, was smothered beneath a wave of indignation which swept the country like a tide.

Often it happens that a leader is born of an emergency, and so it was in the dark days of the first half of 1937. From the disorganized ranks of a huge Democratic majority which had been rubber-stamping Roosevelt measures for four years, there arose the figure of Senator Wheeler of Montana, and soon the liberty-loving legislators of both parties were rallying around his leadership in a fight without parallel in the annals of this Republic. For 168 days the fight continued while the country held its breath in suspense and the President's faithful though unwilling henchman, Senator Robinson, laid down his life for the unworthy cause. Then almost as suddenly as it was begun the fight ended by the Senate voting to send the bill back to committee.

It was August by that time. Members of Congress who had wished to enact legislation to remove some of the barriers from expansion of private business, were ready to leave for a much needed vacation. But hard upon the heels of the adjourned Congress Mr. Roosevelt started a promenade across the country to test the continued popularity of his big smile. Because the crowds still hurrahed at his new platitudes he decided to call a special session of Congress to try to force through new radical legislation.

Even at the threat of this special session stocks began a slide downward which carried at an increasing rate throughout the fall. And with the drop in the market, commodity prices took a corresponding tumble which carried them downward as far in six weeks as they fell during the first year and a half of the depression. Talk of the "recession" became the chief topic of conversation as the year ebbed out. Congress, called to pass new, radical legislation, again balked at the President's bidding and the session ended just before Christmas with no harm done and nothing accomplished, save an innocuous housing measure which holds scant prospect of creating re-employment.

So the year which began on a high note of hope is ended on the sour note of realization that the "recession" is nothing more nor less than the Roosevelt depression.

As to the future in 1938. Much depends upon the attitude of Congress towards business when the new session gets underway early in January. The President can be expected to continue his feud towards private industry—it is a habit fostered by association with radicals like Corcoran and Cohen who are said to be constantly nearest his ears. Congress on the other hand is quite evenly divided, with at least half the members anxious to foster recovery with legislation which will remove some of the load placed upon the necks of business during the past four years. It will be a great struggle, interesting to watch in the coming months.

In any event there is real cause for hope this new depression will be a comparatively short-lived affair. The stock market has shown a distince tendency the past three weeks to level off without any new plunges. Like the panics of 1907 and 1920, it is to be hoped the rapid drop downward in commodity prices will foreshadow a quick recovery that will put men back to work.

1938 should be a far better year than 1937. The menace of court packing has been definitely defeated. Congress has shown the President it will not continue his usurping more powers that belong to Congress and the courts. This should help in the restoration of public confidence in the fundamentals that have nourished its growth through 150 years of progress.

WHAT FACES CHINA?

The Japanese war machine continues its march across devastated China. Thousands have been killed by this unprovoked attack, hundreds of thousands have been made homeless by this undeclared war that has raged for nearly six months.

The saddest part of this inexcusable carnage among the Chinese people is not the killing of her poorly equipped soldiers, or the starvation of her countless refugees fleeing in front of the invading army. China has been invaded before, and always China has emerged from her periods of invasion to raise a rugged head of resistance, her persistent race steadily assimilating the invaders until they have been merged and lost trace of in the hundreds of millions who people the broad domain which spreads over the face of Asia. China may be beaten by the Japanese, China may be temporarily subdued by the brown invaders, but the Chinese people will persistently multiply and gradually swallow those who grab her acres.

The sad part of this latest invasion of China is the fact that a new China was arising out of the internal conflict which has stirred through the slumbering giant for the past decade. A China which had been about half Communist and half Democratic was gradually swinging away from the Red influence. The Chinese people, long despoiled by ruthless war lords were coming to enjoy a measure of freedom they had not known before under the leadership of a Christian general, Chiang Kai Sheck.

And the net result seems to be that the Christian leader is now being forced to turn to the Russian Reds for arms and ammunition to defend his people against the invading Japs. What will be the ultimate outcome of this ruthless attack of Japan upon China? Instead of developing the great Chinese market for her goods Japan will probably find that she has raised a barrier of opposition among the Chinese far more lasting than the boycotts that have been carried on in China previous to the invasion. Instead of thwarting the Red influence in China, Japan will find she has thrown the harrassed Chinese into the arms of the Communists.

These are only surface ramblings of what is going on in China these days. The real tale is being woven with the heartstrings of this much abused people. Can China be brought to understand that people in so-called Christian nations who stand by and see rent by Japanese imperialism, are at heart deeply sympathetic? Can the spark of Christian influence which has been gently fanned by missionaries in China for several decades, withstand the gale of distrust the Japanese invasion has carried with it? What can save China from the fate that would almost certainly seem destined to follow an alliance with the atheists of Russia?

Nothing except the unfolding future will answer these questions. Miss Hille, a returned missionary from China, has expressed her belief the Chinese people will come through this ordeal. That they are resigned to the thought it is their cross and they must bear it. Which is doubtless true of the Christianized Chinese. But what of the millions who have never come under Christian influence, will they reject the teaching of the Reds who seem more willing to lend aid than the Christian nations?

The events of the few next months offer an unparalleled opportunity for Christian nations to show China their good will. An enormous amount of work must be done in prostrated China to keep her homeless millions from starvation. If the Christian nations meet that challenge by giving unstintedly to the suffering multitude China may yet be brought to understand the world has a heart after all.

NEWSPAPERS AND DRUNKEN DRIVING PROBLEMS

"Newspapers mold public opinion faster than any other agency and should be enlisted in the campaign to end drunken driving", says W. A. Gabrielson, Honolulu police chief, in a paper read at the recent National Safety Congress.

It is reliably estimated that drunken driving has at least doubled since the repeal of prohibition. Today it is one of the principal causes of motor accidents. Surveys carried on in various states indicate that liquor is a factor in 10 to 20 per cent of all accidents involving a fatality or a major injury. In the words of the chief of the California State Highway Control, the drunken driving evil "continues to grow unabated . . . Intoxicating liquor is playing too great a part in the present mounting death toll . . ."

The "alcohol-mixed-with-gasoline" problem must be attacked from a number of angles. In many communities police and prosecuting authorities are more or less indifferent to it, and are too prone to let the use of a little "pull" reduce a serious drunken driving charge. While proven scientific methods for establishing whether or not a person is legally intoxicated are known, they have not been widely adopted, with the result that many cases are taken to court without sufficient evidence to justify a conviction. Worst of all, perhaps, a large part of the public tacitly condones drunken driving by refusing to demand rigorous and impartial laws and methods to detect and punish it.

Newspapers can perform a great public service by emphasizing the evil, showing how all of us are potential victims of a drunken motorist, and by carrying on a campaign for betterment in local law enforcement. Alcohol at the wheel kills thousands of Americans each year—and injures tens of thousands. It must be stopped, and this paper will continue to fight the drunken driver menace.

At the End of the Session

By WALTER LIPPMANN

CONGRESS has adjourned amidst a general impression that nothing whatever was accomplished in the special session. But really a great deal was accomplished. In five weeks both houses passed farm bills which, whatever one may think of the principles involved, are certainly measures of great complexity and difficulty. Assuming that farm legislation of this type is necessary for the 1938 crops, the special session has made it possible for the regular session to enact legislation in plenty of time. To have done that much in five weeks is by any ordinary standard to have done a lot.

But in addition the two houses also passed elaborate housing bills and advanced them to the point where a bill can be enacted early in January, in plenty of time for building construction in the spring. Can it fairly be said that to have moved two such great measures through all the preparatory stages in less than five weeks is to have done nothing at all? On November 15 practically no member of either house had seen even a tentative draft of either of these measures. So unless Congress is to be regarded as a mere machine for ratifying laws and not as a legislative assembly, the special session has been very effective indeed.

Moreover, the Congress showed a clear understanding of what was urgent and what was not. It knew that if there was to be farm control for next season, then farm legislation must be passed early in the winter, that if a building revival is to be promoted by new laws, the laws must be passed in the next six weeks. But it knew also that the other measures on the President's program were not urgent. The calendar of the seasons has nothing to do with wages-and-hours legislation, administrative reorganization or regional planning.

The action of Congress has been determined by four major considerations.

The first is that none of the measures asked by the President was ready when Congress met. Many of the bills had not even been drafted. None of them, with the exception of the wages-and-hours bill, had been examined and debated.

The second is that on all the measures asked by the President those most vitally interested were badly divided. On the farm bill the Administration had very different views from the Senate committee. The farm organizations were not unanimous. The dairy and cattle farmers felt quite differently than the cotton, wheat and corn farmers. On the wages-and-hours bill, the Department of Labor was by no means thoroughly in favor of the bill passed by the Senate last summer. The A. F. of L. was violently opposed. The C. I. O. damned it with faint praise. As for tax revision, that was not even part of the President's program, and the supporters of revision were far from being sure how they were going to reconcile their demands for the balancing of the budget with their demands for repeal or drastic revision of the undistributed profits and capital gains tax.

The third consideration is that in the period between the President's call for the special session and the adjournment on Tuesday, a sizable recession in business developed. This was bound to affect the feelings of Congress, as indeed it did.

The fourth consideration is the Panay bombing on the Yangtse River, and the growing realization that in order to make the government's protests effective and to minimize the risks of war, the country must not appear divided or demoralized by domestic conflict.

The combination of these four factors will go far toward explaining why Congress did only what it did.

With Congress adjourned, the President can put his whole attention upon this very delicate business in the Far East. He will need and he will get the general support of the people.

He will get that support not merely because "politics stop at the water's edge," but because every action he and Mr. Hull have taken has commanded the respect and confidence of virtually all varieties of opinion. No one questions their sincerity. No one imagines that they have any undisclosed purposes. No one can doubt the firmness and the prudence with which they are conducting themselves. Under most difficult and trying conditions they are directing American policy with the sure judgment of experienced statesmen, and whatever the outcome, it will be felt by all the country that they have done the best that was possible.

They will be helped much not only by Governor Landon's telegram but by Secretary Stimson's letter on the Ludlow resolution calling for a referendum on a declaration of war. Mr. Stimson's letter is an extraordinary document. It is more than a devastating analysis of this extremely dangerous proposal. It is a brilliant and impressive statement of the fundamental principles of American foreign policy, one of the very clearest and most comprehensive ever made by an American public man.

It should be read now and thoroughly digested before the House votes on the Ludlow resolution in January. But it will be remembered long after the Ludlow resolution is defeated and forgotten. For Mr. Stimson was inspired when he wrote that letter. In the true style of an elder statesman, he has given classic expression to, he has put into words that are restrained, impassioned, and precise, the dominating ideas of American foreign policy. His letter will, I believe, long be cited in the texts as authoritative, and it will take its place in the high tradition of American politics.

Resistant Pacifism

By DOROTHY THOOMPSON

How one feels about what has happened and is happening in the Far East, depends, in the long run, on one's fundamental philosophy. We, and every other person and nation in the world, who believe in peace, have a choice of two attitudes. We can either believe in non-resistance, in which case, we ought to be prepared to carry that attitude to its ultimate conclusion, or we can believe that peace is a positive—not a negative—thing, is a certain condition of affairs among men, and that it is our duty as passionate peace-lovers to defend that condition of affairs, constantly, from day to day, by positive resistance to encroachments upon it.

I have the deepest respect for the first attitude, when it is wholehearted. I have, for instance, the deepest respect for Mr. Gerald Heard, the British pacifist, and for Miss Vera Brittain, the English novelist, with whom I had the pleasure of a conversation this week. Miss Brittain went through the last war, which she has most movingly described, and has come to a final conclusion, as far as she herself is concerned. That conclusion is: War is evil. Any kind of peace is better than any kind of war. Better a Nazi invasion of Great Britain, and its occupation for several generations, than to try to overcome war with war. Endure anything, rather than resist with force. For resistance with force turns you, yourself, your country and your nation, into the pattern of behavior of the aggressor. You cannot defend civilization, I think she would argue, except with the instruments of civilization. Resort to the instruments of barbarism, and you, yourself, become a barbarian.

This is the attitude of some of the noblest spirits. It is the attitude which Mr. Sidney Howard has sensitively depicted in "The Ghost of Yankee Doodle"—and found it difficult to dramatize, since drama is struggle, and the non-resister is not dramatic. Nevertheless, we should be grateful to him for having used his arts to put on the American stage the intellectual query of these times.

If you believe that life is a struggle between good and evil—if you have a dualist philosophy,—this will not be your viewpoint. You will conceive of peace, as the positive demonstration in life and behavior of certain positive principles. It is not very difficult to define what those principles are. They are, that individuals as well as nations must live with the most sensitive respect for each other and conduct their affairs inside the spirit and letter of law.

It is quite impossible, in the long run, for either individuals or groups, or nations, or classes inside nations, to live together in peace without the implicit and sincere acceptance of certain standards, and codes of behavior. The resistant pacifist will cherish these standards as the first condition of peace, and will resist their violation at every single point. For his thesis will be, that the accumulation of failures to resist encroachment upon these standards, will progressively contribute to abolish the standards altogether, and eventually land us in a world where there is no code, no law, no principle, and no standards. And such a world is the barbaric domain of naked force. Such a world means chaos, which is the opposite of the ordered relations between men, which is peace.

I do not wish, in so serious a crisis as now confronts us over the Far Eastern question, to seek to propagandize for a point of view. It is not my desire to influence anyone. I merely wish to state the viewpoint, which has slowly become my own conviction.

Unresisted violations of the codes of peaceful men have accumulated in the last years one by one. The civilized world has had its face slapped and has turned the other cheek so often that it has become rotary. The Treaty of Versailles was, itself, in its totality, an act of aggression against which civilized men did not sufficiently, or loudly enough, protest. Out of bad conscience, then, out of the after-taste of their own non-resistance they accepted, with too little protest, the incredible barbarities of the Hitler regime. It was "none of their business," that the Germans took the most brutal revenge upon the world's most helpless minority—a minority with no nation at their back to defend them, lumping all men and women of Jewish blood, good, bad, and indifferent, into one category, and subjecting them to every possible insult and humiliation. We went and played games with people whose open and accepted behavior violates all rules of sportsmanship. We sent official delegations to universities, whose behavior violates every conception of the University, as it has existed since the Middle Ages!

Christian gentlemen, in this era, have sat down at dinner with murderers, in more countries than one, and discussed politics with men whose ideas of behavior are exactly those of the New York underworld. Shall I name names? Is it murder to shoot a defenseless man and his wife in his home? Is it murder to drag an old man from his bed and beat him to death, for a quarrel ten years' back. All without even the pretense of trial! And who is the murderer? Does it make any difference whether he did the deed himself, or sent a hireling to do it?

As civilized men and women we have failed to resist the cynical breaking of every kind of international treaty and agreement. We have failed to resist the impertinent and reckless intervention of conspiratorial organizations, supported in one way or another by foreign powers, in our own internal affairs. We have failed to resist, inside our own country, the flagrant violation of the fundamental law of the Constitution, as it is being violated in Jersey City at this moment, by Mayor Hague, and as it has been violated for years in Louisiana, and as it has been violated by government raids into people's personal affairs. The sum-total of all these non-resistances adds up eventually to the necessity of a titanic resistance, when the aggressions have precipitated revolution, and confront civilized men with the necessity of either taking a last stand, against heavy odds, or going under, for generations.

Hitler came into power in Germany, with an extremely aggressive program, after years of agitation against Poland. Most people believed that, should Germany ever attack, it would be through Poland, in the East, with the so-called Polish corridor as a battle cry. Pilsudski acted immediately. He posed the definite question. Do you want war or peace? If you want war, you shall have it, right now. If you want peace, you must make it, right now. And Hitler made peace ten years. Which is something.

Pilsudski contribute to war, or did he contribute to peace?

Is there a possibility of living in peace, without the willingness to live dangerously, in behalf of the things that the very word Peace implies? And do we not live dangerously, in any case? And if we live dangerously, shall we not try to open our eyes and our heads

Mr. and Mrs. John Dorr of Borden and Mrs. Lillian Sprague of Sherrill were Friday night guests of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Crane.

BETTER POULTRY OUTLOOK

A better year in 1938 for poultrymen because of lower feed prices and fewer hens in the state is predicted by economists at the New York State College of Agriculture. On the unfavorable side, the current recession in business and uncertainty of demand darken the picture.

Fewer chickens are noted on farms throughout the United States and with favorable feed prices, less rigorous culling may be expected. Larger spring hatchings are predicted for 1938.

The long-time poultry outlook is also indicated as favorable.

Marriage Licenses Issued in 1937 Exceed Previous Year by One

There were 29 permits to wed issued by Town Clerk Weatherby during present year — Many licenses issued to Pennsylvanians — New 72 hour law cuts total towards close of year—August exceeded June as month of brides.

There were 29 marriage licenses issued by Town Clerk George H. Weatherby during the year 1937 according to records on file in his office. This is one more than was issued in the previous year, 1936. Many of these licenses were issued to Pennsylvanians and others were issued to couples living outside the town of Addison.

The change in the license law requiring 72 hours between the time of issuing the license and the marriage ceremony has caused many couples from outside the state to change their minds about coming here as they did under the old law. This law is also believed to have reduced the number of licenses issued in the local clerk's office.

The couples receiving licenses and the dates of issuance are printed below as a resume of the year 1937.

Russell Stevens, Corning and Kathleen Tennant, January 16; Clarence Martin, Westfield and Doris Kent, Westfield, January 16; Thomas Melik, Washington, Pa., and Dorothy Kyser, February 8; Melvin Root, Corning, and Bernice Christiansen, February 13; Warren G. Stiker and Norma Closson, March 19; Franklyn Ripley and Idabelle Whitmore, March 31; Leon James Miller, Jersey Shore and Mary Ellen Harvey, Jersey Shore, April 28; Floyd Van Wagner, Potter County, Pa., and Mary Reed, also of Potter County, May 12; George Stevens, Compbell and Maud M. Crane, May 13; William Houghtaling and Mary Alice Gardner, June 3; Basil M. White, Elkland and Shirley Weiskopff, June 11; Jaams A. Sherrife, Cattaraugus County and Marjorie Van Slyke, Lockhaven, June 13; Merle F. Coates, Elkland and Phillis Shaw, Mansfield, June 19.

Also Ray Thornton, Wellsboro and Marjorie Gerow, Wellsboro, June 23; Guy Francis Stonemetz, Austin, Pa. and Margaret Bernice Smith, Austin, July 3; Bernard Elwood and Nancy Gigee, August 6; Ray Edward Harrau, Lockhaven, Pa., and Dorothy E. Conklin, Lockhaven, August 7; E. Russell Osborn, Albany and Janet E. Crane, August 12; John Frederick Goyne, Ashland and Betty Catherine Baltzer, Jersey Shore; August 14; Joseph Ordway, Nelson, Pa. and Dorothy Finch, Nelson, August 20; Theodore P. Laffkas and Janet L. Streeter, Westfield, August 28; Elmer D. Allen and Mildred J. Leone, August 28; John Henry Phillips and Helen Marie Sareen, September 25; Richard G. Derby Wellsboro and Elizabeth D. Brooks, Wellsboro, October 1; Ernest Rice, Austinburg and Vivian Guinnip, Austinburg, October 14; Rudolph Kuczma, Bath and Pretha Manley, November 15; William Holub, Newfield and Flora Hill, November 20; Porter Coon, Tuscarora and Ruth Mattison, Elkland, December 14; Francis Joseph Loree, Hornell and Natalie Jeanette Hopper, Troupsburg, December 19; Arnold Gabel, Addison and Lucile Chart, Addison, December 21; Donald Burlingame, Addison and Eva Wade, Addison, December 28.

A tabulation of the licenses issued shows that 14 of them were issued where one or both of the contracting parties are from Addison and 15 were issued to out-of-town couples.

August far exceeded June with seven applicants. Tabulations in other months are as follows: January, two; February, two; March, two; April, one, May, two; June, five; July, two; August, seven; September, one; October, two; November, two and December one.

HIGHWAYS AND MOTOR TAXES

The proposal before Congress to slash appropriations for Federal aid of highways is certain to become one of the hottest debates of the winter.

Direct taxes paid by highway users, the owners and operators of motor vehicles; on industries that depend upon highway transportation; direct taxes collected by the states and the Federal Government, reach enormous figures. Gasoline taxes, taxes on motor fuels, registration and license fees, together with certificates of titles—and what else have you, Mr. Motorist?

Statisticians produce figures to show that car-owners now pay over one-sixth of all taxes in the United States—Federal, State and local.

Now comes Senator Lonergan of Connecticut, with a proposition that he wishes put before the motorists of the country, to re-establish the old and discarded principle of toll roads. The Senator suggests that it would be an easy way to get more money out of the motorists.

For the thrifty housewife's recipe files, it is helpful to have a left-over section including recipes that make use of such foods as sour milk and cream, left-over vegetables and meats, or hard bread.

Congressman Cole Cites Dearth Of Work in Goose Egg Session

Washington, Dec. ---Representative W. Sterling Cole is anything but pleased by the lack of accomplishments of the special session of Congress just brought to a close. He says, however, that a new independence of spirit is evident and and expresses the hope that the New Year will bring an improved degree of co-operation between government and business.

In an interview Mr. Cole said:

"Called by the President to meet Nov. 15, the special and extraordinary session of Congress has come to a close after five and a half weeks of fruitless effort and is quite properly called the 'goose egg' session of the 75th Congress At the time of the call for the special session the President saw an existing emergency which required immediate attention and listed on the program of things to be done four major items of legislation: Crop control, wages and hours regulation, reorganization of the government and creation of the seven regional power authorities similar to the Tennessee Valley Authority.

"At the time the President issued the call there was an emergency but of a quite different type than imagined by the chief executive A severe business recession had begun and threatened to develop into a major depression.

"Instead of taking steps to handle the real emergency Congress devoted its time to the original program of the executive none of which would have stemmed the decline in the price of commodities, durable goods, stocks or bonds or prevented the rising course of unemployment although several recommendations to accomplish these purposes were made by individual members of Congress.

"A deaf ear was turned to the pleas for repeal or modification of the undistributed profits tax and excess profits tax, admitted by the Adminisration to be in need of overhauling. No effort was made to balance the budget and remove the government from competition with business; no word of encouragement was given to business itself which might dispel the fear that grips it.

"The sum total of measures enacted by the special session consists of an authorization to lend some paintings to an exhibit in connection with the Sesquicentennial celebration of the Constitution, payment of travel allowances to members, payment of salaries to page boys and extension of the period to construct a bridge over the Tennessee River.

"Much has been said and written about the Congressional travel allowance, as though it were a grab by the members and entirely unwarranted. Although I was among the few who voted against its payment, believing that unless there was a substantial period of time between the special and regular sessions of Congress the members were not entitled to it, now that adjournment has taken place and it is established that the special session will not extend into the regular one, there are many reasons justifying the payment of the allowance.

"Among the items of legislation considered but definitely rejected was the wages and hours bill which if enacted, would have created a new agency of government with power of life and death over all businesses affecting interstate commerce and this, sooner or later, would have meant the death of all labor unions. Many of us voted to substitute a proposal to empower the Federal Trade Commission, an existing agency which commands the respect of all parties, to prohibit goods in interstate commerce made under oppressive labor conditions.

"The farm program was passed by both Houses but in such completely changed terms and form that it was necessary for a conference on the bills between members of both bodies—and the conference will not be held until after the beginning of the regular session. Both bills were so drastic in their measures for control of the farmer that even the farmers themselves rose up against it.

"Incidentally, the argument used to defend the Constitutional legality of the measures, in the face of the Supreme Court decisions invalidating the AAA on the ground that Congress had no legal authority to regulate and control the production of farm products, was that this measure did not seek to control production but simply the marketing of farm products. in other words a farmer would be permitted to raise all he might desire but was restricted and penalized in the sale of his products.

"To my mind the most encouraging thing accomplished by the special session was the fact that Congress had apparently begun to reassert itself and has, for a time at least, broken away from the executive domination under which it has operated for the past four years. It is to be hoped that this independence will continue and that the New Year will bring a better understanding and a spirit of co-operation between government and business".

1937—another better year for dairying.

Income of the nation's dairy farmers for 1937 is estimated at $1,470,000,000. This is $53,000,000 more than last year, and $181,000,000 over 1935 — $337,000,000 better than 1934.

For everyone in the dairy industry—this year and every year—increased income very largely depends upon new and wider markets for milk and milk products.

The end of 1937 marks another milepost in Borden's unbroken record of 80 years of merchandising dairy products—research, advertising and selling all forms of milk.

Milk Bargaining Head Says Farm Revenue Up $1,000,000

In his address before the 350 delegates, members and guests who attended the first annual convention of the Bargaining Agency, President Homer Rolfe stated that the Agency's work had brought more than $2,000,000 to up-state New York milk producers. He also said that formation of the agency was "the most progressive action of dairy farmers since the beginning of the marketing of fluid milk".

He asserted that price increases obtained for member cooperatives, listed on the Agency books at more than 100, in June and September raised the producers' income more than $1,000,000 each time.

He reviewed events that followed the lapse of state milk control, the passing of the Rogers-Allen law, clearing the way for combined cooperatives to negotiate with dealers, and the early "success" of the Bargaining Agency.

"I am not so foolish to claim", Rolfe warned, "that we are out of the woods in this business of cooperative marketing of milk. We still face a dozen problems, any one of which might well split us wide open again. The moment we fail to agree, we have a hole for unscrupulous dealers to burst through".

In the selection of officers for the coming year, Homer S. Rolfe of Ogdensburg was re-elected president. Other officers named are: Vice-president, Leon A. Chapin of North Bangor; secretary, Jay C. Treat of Honeoye Falls and chairman of the executive committee, E. H. Skillman of Smithville Flats. E. C Bordin of West Winfield succeeded H. H. Evans of Hamilton as treasurer.

After a prolonged discussion the delegates decided to increase the membership of the board of directors from 15 to 21. New directors are: Dr. Kenneth Shaul of Cobleskill, Sheriff Huffcut of Middletown, Ernest C. Strobeck of Macedon, Earl Laidlaw of Gouverneur, Joseph Davis of Little Marsh, Pa., W. A. Mather of Adams, Dr. R. E. Davis of Clinton and H. S. Stannard of Fair Haven, Vt.

Directors re-elected are: F. H Child of Amsterdam, J. A. Coulter of Watertown, Warren Davey of Greene, J. R. Humphrey of Holland Patent, L. E. Maynard of Philadelphia, Ralph C. Norton of Boonville, Fred H. Sexauer of Auburn, A. J. Williams of Franklinville, Bardin, Chapin, Rolfe, Skillman and Treat.

Most important of the twelve resolutions adopted concerned the Black-Connery wages and hours bill. The agency's delegates expressed themselves as "unalterably opposed" to the bill on the following grounds:

It would increase the price of commodities farmers buy and destroy any possibility of achieving price parity between agriculture and industry.

It proposes a five-man federal board with power of life and death over agriculture, labor and industry, and delegates autocratic powers contrary to the concept of democratic government.

The bill would make it virtually impossible for the farmers to obtain hired help at wages within their reach.

Another resolution urged Governor Lehman and the legislature to use "Much larger amounts of revenues from gasoline tax for improvement of secondary road systems" for the benefit of farming areas.

The delgates, representing 50,000 upstate dairymen, also asked that the workmen's compensation law be amended "so as to exempt not only farm labor, but labor incidental to and connected with farm management".

The delegates indorsed the state farm bureau federation dairy committee's program for a state appropriation of $60,000 for a breeding program thru records on dairy farms.

BRASS TACKS For POULTRY RAISERS

By BURTON P. THARP

Pests

In a preceding issue we elaborated somewhat at length on the causes of colds and roup in poultry. Promptly we caught cold ourselves. In trying to find the cause we were struck with the similarity between chickens and humans in the matter of catching colds.

In poultry the principal causes are improper food, poor management, over-crowded conditions, poor physical condition, poor ventilation and other minor ones. After ticking off these possible causes we remembered. It was poor management and over-crowded conditions.

In other words we met THAT FELLOW. Everybody knows at least one. He has a cold. He has something of little or no importance to tell you in a very confidential manner. He simply must take you by the elbow or better still by both shoulders. He simply must back you into a corner. Then he explodes point blank at you at a range of 20 inches or less.

Poultry pests are similar to human ones in a way— they simply must have close, physical contact with their victims in order to accomplish their purpose. They sometimes are a contributary cause of other sickness in poultry because they weaken the birds. Every flock should be examined periodically for lice and mites.

Lice are probably the more common. They are found near the vent and under the wings of the birds. They are quite easily removd by rubbing lice powder on the birds and by cleaning and spraying the house thoroughly with a strong solution of some coal tar disinfectant. Several are on the market and may be purchased from most any drug store or feed dealer.

The more common mites are the red mites. They are to be found in cracks and crevices in the poultry house. Although they are called red mites they are gray in color until after they have sucked blood from the birds. During the day they may be found in the woodwork of the house. A colony of them appear like a patch of salt and pepper. Clean the house and equipment and spray with a strong solution of some coal tar disinfectant forcing it into every crack and rough spot in the woodwork. Several applications may be necessary.

How, What and Why

This paper has arranged with the Office of Information of the New York State Colleges of Agriculture and Home Economics to answer questions about problems of farm and home. If you enclose a self-eddressed, stamped envelope, and mention the name of this paper, you will receive a direct reply to your query from the colleges. Do not ask more than one question in one letter or on one post card. Ask as many questions as you like, but make each one a separate communication.

Waste Products

W. G. Inquires about some waste products that can be fed to sheep.

Professor J. P. Willman of the animal hisbandry department replies: "Sheep are noted for their ability to use waste products, and in the winter help the farmer to use much feed that would not find a ready market.

"Sheep will consume large amounts of cull beans, unsalable cabbage, bean straw or bean pods, oat or wheat straw, corn stover, corn fodder and the like.

"For best results the sheep should receive, in addition, some alfalfa, clover, soybean or other legume hays. Silage and roots are valuable additions to the ration."

Winter Protection?

E. W. wants to know if his asparagus should have been given winter protection.

A. J. Pratt of the department of vegetable crops answers: "Asparagus plantings that are well established do not need winter protection.

"If the tops are not diseased however, they are often left standing to serve as a snow trap, thus somewhat protecting the bed against alternate freezing and thawing, which may do some damage by breaking and drying out the fleshy storage roots."

VAN VLEETS

L. H. Van Vliet attended the funeral of his nephew, Purley Warfle, at the home of Mr. Warfle's son, Irving Warfle, in Osceola, Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Brooks, daughters Evelyn and Catherine, attended a gathering of the Brooks family at the home of his sister, Mrs. Percy Herrington in Nichols, Sunday.

Motor Jars, Jams and Jeopardies

By J. B. Momsen — Aritcle III

One of the most common forms of motor vehicle accidents is the injury to pedestrians, or the outright killing of a person who travels afoot. Here the question of right-of-way, warnings and so on, enter into the subject.

Most cities have ordinances, and some states laws, giving the pedestrian the right-of-way on the change of a light. But it is rarely that motorists heed that law, and they usually usurp the right and turn the corner without respect to whether a pedestrian is crossing with the light, and has the right to finish.

Also, it is well to bear in mind that many persons who drive cars, change their viewpoints when they have to walk. There is always danger of perjury testimony. Even when the pedestrian has looked heedlessly in only one direction, he or some witnesses may claim that the fault was solely with the driver.

The rights of the motorist, his speed as dictated by legal terms and also by the speedometer or a fair estimate of speed—the distance the car moved after contacting the injured person—failure of the driver to do something he might or should have done to avoid the accident—distance from the injured of the vehicle when the pedestrian started to cross the street—if the pedestrian became confused and turned back without warning—if any one in or out of the motor vehicle gave the injured person timely warning—condition of that person's sight and hearing, and many other factors enter into the case.

But it is usually conceded that the hit-and-run driver, when apprehended, or the one leaving the scene of an accident, is self-condemned. It is not easy to find either a jury or a jurist who will not take this point of view, in spite of the oft-repeated excuse, "I was so excited, I did not know what I was doing".

The adjuster is usually able to separate the true from the false, the emotional from the actual—but not always—especially where there were no witnesses, or only the ones intimately concerned.

Where the victim of the accident died, his or her testimony cannot be secured, but only if witnesses of the speed of the car or other lack of respect for speed laws can be located, it is probable that the real facts can be ascertained.

Qustiones Answered

Ques.: Why is it that the coroner's jury is usually lenient to drivers? —J. L. M.

Ans.: We cannot say that this is the rule. But ofttimes when the driver has seriously wounded or killed a pedestrian or other driver or passenger in a car or truck, even where there is no insurance, the liable person is generally alert enough to secure the services of an adjuster or investigator and at once get busy on witnesses. Too often the injured person goes to court wholly unprepared.

Ques.: A neighbor of ours borrowed our car and got into an accident that not only damaged the car, but is likely to get us into court for a hospital bill. Doesn't our insurance protect us?—W. F. C.

Ans.: Unfortunately it does not. Further, you as owner are responsible for damages if they are proved, but you may consult your attorney as to the feasibility of suing your friend for damaging your car and causing injury to another. This habit of letting others operate one's car is very bad.

Ques.: Last year when we were in Canada, we got into a bad jam with our car and while we are away from the jurisdiction of those courts, our car was held. Aren't we protected under our insurance?

Ans.: Not unless you were insured while driving in Canada. As to recovering your car, you will have to consult some Canadian attorney about this, or arrange through your own lawyer.

Milk Agency And Dairy Leaders Confer

Syracuse, Dec. 29 - An invitation was extended today to representatives of the Dairy Farmers Union to confer here next week with officials of the Metropolitan Cooperative Milk Producers Bargaining Agency to seek a way to prevent collapse of prices paid farmers for milk by New York City dealers.

Directors of the Bargaining Agency met with spokesmen for the dealers December 22 and heard their demand for immediate price reductions to meet competition of milk supplied some New York dealers through the Union at prices below the Agency schedule.

Homer S. Rolfe, president of the Producers Agency announced today that invitations have been extended to Union representatives to meet with the Executive Committee of the Agency here.

"Such a conference," said Mr. Rolfe, "involves no sacrifice of standing, pride or position by either group. We believe Union leaders or some of their substantial men will answer our request with their presence."

Saying that dairymen have received during the past two months the first satisfactory price in years Mr. Rolfe asserted, "there is no reason as far as supply and demand is concerned, why there should be any milk price reduction in January. Farmers will not accept a cut in prices unless every expedient to hold them has been tried and failed.

"We do not believe any producer, regardless of organization affiliation, is willing to penalize himself or his fellow producers by deliberately contributing to a decline in prices. But, we do believe some dealers, who have in the past exploited farmers to their own advantage, will continue to mislead producers both as to prices and ability to pay and thus continue a course profitable to themselves and destructive to farmers.

"If these dealers and a few leaders are so insensitive to the welfare of a considerable group of producers that they are willing to sacrifice the good that may accrue to the many for the benefit of a handful, it is time that substantial thinking producers took the situation into their own hands.

"If the Dairy Farmers Union intends to continue activities, it is folly for its members to kick the economic props from under themselves when they might enjoy the added benefits which would continue if the price of milk is maintained."

SPORTS ON PARADE

by Leo Bolley

Editor's Note: Every week in this paper, Leo Bolley, famous sports expert and radio commentator on WGY and WFBL, will discuss sports from the angle of an Up-State fan.

LIFE is just a bowl of bowl games this week as that old football season that we thought had died weeks ago comes back to life on New Year's Day.

Do we have to pick the winners again? Might as well. We've been out on a limb so long we feel like Tarzan. Here goes:

The Bowl of Roses at Pasadena—California over Alabama. The Crimson Tide has been commuting out to California on and off, and mostly on. The Tide's record is clean but somehow or other this year's outfit doesn't seem to be the same type of team that was turned out in the days of Hutson and Howell. So, California, here we come—out for you flat-footed.

The Bowl of Cotton at Dallas—Whizzer White and company should lead Colorado to a victory over Rice.

The Bowl of Sugar at New Orleans—It looks like Louisiana State over Santa Clara. While both have had splendid seasons, L.S.U. has proved itself against stronger opponents.

The Bowl of Oranges at Miami—Auburn gets our call over Michigan State.

The Bowl of Sun at El Paso—Here it's West Virginia over Texas Tech. At least we think it is.

East meets West at San Francisco—And we pick the East. Not because that's where we live, but because the East has shown its sectional superiority in most decisive fashion this year.

And then, of course, there's the Bowl of Ice in Alaska. Two unbeaten and untied Eskimo teams (they never lost because they never played the game before) will meet in the first Ice Bowl game for the championship of the Bering Sea. We imagine that the strategy up there will be for a team to get an early lead and then freeze the ball.

And that's the end of football till next year.

Work is progressing rapidly on the imposing stone building which is to house baseball's museum and national shrine at Cooperstown, N. Y. This beautiful structure will cost more than $100,000.

Cooperstown is improving the playing field—the one on which Abner Doubleday and his friends played the first game of baseball in 1839. There's a movement on foot to have the Yankees and the Giants play a benefit for the museum at Cooperstown next Summer. A swell idea.

This Week In Sports

By the Grandstander

Jake Kilion, 78, died last week. That name means little to present day fight fans but to the older generations it meant Jake Kilion, the last man to go 75 rounds bare fisted with the great John L. Sullivan. Lately he has been working as a nightwatchman in a ship yard. Diabetes is given as the cause of his death.

—o—

Harvey Herman has resigned as coach at Pennsylvania after one of the most disastrous seasons for that team. No successor has been chosen as yet by President Gates and the governing board. However, Harry Kipke and Andy Kerr are being prominently mentioned for the job.

—o—

Lou Gehrig was considerably shaken up over the week-end and narrowly escaped serious injury in a motor accident.

—o—

Connie Mack, Philadelphia's contribution to baseball, observed his 75th birthday last week. Prominent players of this and past generations met to mark the day at a banquet.

—o—

The True gymansium used by the Addison Merchants basketball squad has been given a coat of paint and a cleaning by the fellows on the team. Several gallons of paint have been used to renovate the interior to make it more attractive to basketball fans of Addison and vicinity.

—o—

The question was asked the other night, "Which is heavier a bantamweight or a featherweight?" This writer remembers under previous regulations that the bantamweight was the lighter, but under the new setup of the AAU the featherweight is five to ten pounds lighter than the bantamweight.

—o—

Some of those present at Connie Mack's birthday party last week were: Chief Bender, Carlisle Indian school pitcher who made baseball history, Harry Davis, big shouldered first baseman of the first pennant winners Connie ever had, Farmer Whitey Witt who formerly served as outfielder with the Philadelphians and also with the Yankees, Catcher Bill Killefer, Herb Pennock the smooth pitching idol and those from Mack's last championship crew included Cugar Snoking Jimmie Dykes, Rube Walberg and Howard Ehmke and many others.

Tommy Farr, the confident Welsh miner, arrived last Thursday from his native land for a go with James J. Braddock, former world's heavyweight holder. The match is scheduled for Madison Square Garden January 21. Incidentally Farr predicts Louis will knock out Schmeling on their next meeting.

—o—

Herb Kopf is slated for the Chick Meehan coaching job at Manhattan according to some of those believed inside. Over 40 candidates have applied for the job.

—o—

Slingin' Sammy Baugh, Texas State's gift to professional football, has been termed the greatest passer in the football game today. Quite an honor in this here football conscious country of ours.

—o—

Betting is two sided in most of the bowl games being planned around the country with California having a slight edge in the Alabama-California battle Saturday. Injuries have crippled practice sessions of both teams.

Sign Composed of 750 Pine Trees in Canisteo

Canisteo—What is believed to be the world's largest sign is located in this village. It is a sign "Canisteo" made of 750 Scotch pines set out on a hill side on the Edwin Childs farm. A great deal of preliminary work was done in surveying the lot to lay out this huge sign which is plainly visible from the air and may be seen from the state road.

The Star of Bethlehem

W. M. Young, Sc. D.

God runs the great events of His universe on time. The earth revolves around the sun in 365 days, 6 hours, 9 minutes and 9 seconds, and keeps better time than any watch or clock ever constructed by man. He had it timed so that a star appeared in unusual brilliancy over Bethlehem when His Son came into the world; He timed a total eclipse of the sun or some other great darkness when Christ died on the cross, and an earthquake when He arose from the dead. There is to be a great earthquake when he comes again.

The Bible declares that "By the work of the Lord were the heavens made and all the host of them by the breath of His mouth". "All things were made by Him, and without Him was not anything made that was made". John 1:3. Christ is a home in His universe. He is not here by courtesy, not in a foreign or hostile field, but in his own home. Christ fills the universe. His wisdom is enclosed in an atom and expanded in the starry worlds. Nature is fuller and richer to use when the glorious and gracious Maker is disclosed to us in His works. The greatest thing in the Christian Church is the personal presence of Christ. Christ lives and is here. We may study all biology and all geology and all astronomy, and if we do not find Christ in His universe, we shall miss the best. Our study of the anatomy of man will interest us, but it will not be complete unless we discover the soul. People try to proceed in two ways with their studies: they look from nature up to nature's God: or they start with God and look out into the natural universe. The discovery of God enhances all studies and opens up before the mind the glory of a universe in which God reigns.

The Rambler

How is the Christmas pocketbook? If it is anything like mine its contents could not even line a thimble. But it was a good Christmas and I hope that those to come are just as good.

—o—

I got quite a kick out of going into stores before Christmas and watching the kiddies. Several times my leg was pulled by youngsters who temporarily lost their parents and in looking at toys reached for the nearest adult to show them the toy they desired.

—o—

It recently came to the attention of the Rambler that a woman bought some pancake flour, placed it in her car and went shopping for more groceries. When she returned the pancake flour was gone and so were her hopes of pancakes. She thinks now she put the flour in the wrong car.

—o—

A man walked up to a local physician just before Christmas and paid $20 on a long due bill. The joke of it was that the doctor had to ask the man's name and what the bill was for.

—o—

It has always amused me that D. L. Sherwood should work for the D. L. or Dairy League. and in giving me a report of a recent meet he said the chief speaker was Mr. Milk also of the League and then added that there is a Mr. Bull in the organization.

—o—

Auto deaths over the Christmas holiday took the place of the old time reports we used to receive of fires from lighted candles on Christmas trees. Both are caused by carelessness on someone's part.

—o—

A staff member observes that Addison's Main street is not wide enough for motor traffic for Sunday morning at 8 o'clock he observed auto tracks on the east side of Main street from Valerio Parkway to the Avon Theatre.

—o—

A fellow columnist in a nearby paper made known last year to his readers, through the column, that he liked a certain kind of cake. And readers sent him several. I like candy.

—o—

Motorists do appreciate the work done by the town highway and county highway departments in sanding the roads to prevent cars sliding, but care should be used in throwing off ashes, cinders or sand in doing this job to make a good job better. This thought is brought about by the fact that a car was struck by a shovel full of cinders on Cowley Hill Monday night and had the window of the car been open, there is no telling what reaction the driver might have had when struck in the face by a shovel full of cinders. And the passengers in his car were endangered.

—o—

The 40 and 8, good time organization of the American Legion, has a good system to keep order at business meetings. Anyone not properly addressing the chair, not wearing the badge or button of the organization, speaking out of turn or committing other infractions of rules of good conduct are fined small sums. This money is used for welfare work, but it makes a member stop and think after he is fined a few times. Some of the local boys paid at the Sunday meeting. Ask Chief Bovee, Andy Knebel or Tank Edwards.

—o—

munity Christmas tree already. munity Christmas trees already. Tree bulbs were broken sometime Tuesday night, unscrewed from their sockets and left lying at the foot of the tree. Why is it that when there is a thing of beauty on display some person takes delight in spoiling it?

—o—

Speaking of Christmas lights, it is quite a treat to go about the village and see the lights in the various homes and also the decorative schemes householders have used to decorate their homes. The residential streets of Addison are equal to those of other communities this size.

—o—

Chief of Police Elmer Bovee has taken a couple of unnecessary lickings during the past week when making arrests and the arrested persons became belligerent. Noticed his uniform in the cleaners yesterday after one of these affairs. I think I'll stick to newswriting.

—o—

Addison has been free from any major calamities during the past year. No major fires or other problems have confronted the village. A review of the year, as printed in other columns of the paper, may refresh your memory on events of the past year in this vicinity.

—o—

Happy New Year to you all and may it be even more prosperous than the past year.

—o—

That's all.

Keep Calm For Better Digestion

Persons who habitually worry about their problems, or who are always in a rush are most likely to have stomach disorders from indigestion, according to professor A. L. Winsor of the New York State College of Agriculture.

"When you have a good appetite, are hungry and are making no mental exertion, your saliva will flow rapidly upon eating to aid digestion. But if you are tired, sleepy, embarrassed, have been drinking alcohol, or engaged in hard thinking, then the supply of saliva will be definitely lessened."

The texture, taste and odor of such foods as meat, bread, caviar or tea-sandwiches, the position of food in the mouth, the teeth involved in chewing, the size of the mouthful, the dryness of the food all have their effect upon the quantity and quality of the saliva secreted, according to Dr. Winsor.

"When the flow of saliva is rapid, the secretion is alkaline; but when the flow is retarded, it is acid, regardless of the type of food."

First Aid School Open to All in This Vicinity

Interest is being created here in the class in first aid being organized to begin activity Tuesday, January 4, 1938. The first step in the organization of the course is a poster contest conducted in the high school art classes under the direction of Miss Bethel Caster. About 20 posters have been prepared and will be on exhibition in the John W. Russ store until after the course starts.

These posters will be judged by a committee of three: one from the Women's Civic Society, Norman Phelps and Miss Catherine Closson. Awards will be made to first and second place winners at a special assembly program to be held Monday, January 3. Dr. Amos G. Stiker, chairman of the American Legion, sponsors of the safety first school, will preside at the assembly.

Residents of Rathbone, Woodhull, Orr Hill, Cameron and Cameron Mills are invited to take part in the school which will run one night weekly for 15 weeks.

A committee on preliminary plans met in the office of Dr. Stiker Monday night to prepare plans for the opening of the school and the special assembly program. Those present were: Chief of Police Elmer Bovee, Clair Chart for the American Legion; Mrs. Francis Edwards for the Legion Auxiliary; Mrs. Francis Hill for the Women's Civic Society who originated the plan; Dr. Stiker and Harry Mullen for the publicity committee.

Mrs. Chappell Dies at 91

Mrs. Ella A. Chappell, 91, died Wednesday noon, December 29, 1937 at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Bert Harry, Steuben street. Death was caused by the infirmities of old age. She had been in good health until about two months ago when she received a fall injuring her hip. Since that time she has been confined to her home in Steuben street, only moving to the place of her decease a month ago.

Mrs. Chappell lived alone over 30 years. She was kindly and active and was seen about the village many times daily and was active in the affairs of the Methodist Church.

She was twice married, her second husband being a Civil War veteran. His death occurred about 30 years ago. She has been receiving a government pension pension since his death.

Mrs. Chappell was born October 4, 1846. The surviving relatives are: a grandson Donald Chamberlain, Buffalo; son-in-law, Arthur Chamberlain, Castile; step daughter, Mrs. Knapp in Elmira and a nephew Floyd Chase, Kenmore. Funeral arrangements have not been made.

Mrs. Armstrong Honored By State Grange

Mrs. Kenneth Armstrong, Maple street, has been signally honored by the New York State Grange. She has been awarded second prize in the state for her notebook as Pomona Lecturer. As Pauline Armstrong she was lecturer of Steuben Pomona last year.

The note book contains the proposed progams for Pomona meetings, the names of all Granges in this district, the names and addresses of the lecturers, gives reports of subordinate Granges in the district and contains the goals and accomplishments of the Grange throughout the year.

This note book was in competition with books of lecturers thruout the state. The award was announced this week by Mrs. Stella Miller, West Chazy, state lecturer. Mrs. Armstrong received a State Grange insignia pin with the Grange insignia in gold and the whole surrounded by brilliants.

Democrats in the Senate are forecasting a fight within their party when Congress re-convenes. The conservative senators are determined to resist a further attempt by the President to force through the wages and hours legislation defeated in the last session, even though they admit the party split will probably hold over into the 1940 election.
